INTRODUCTION

Gallup Pakistan conducted a large scale Election Day Survey on the Election Day, 10th October 2002 across all four provinces of Pakistan, including Islamabad.

The 2002 election was held under the auspices of a military government and an annulled constitution. Leaders of two major political parties, Benazir Bhutto and Nawaz Sharif, were not allowed to participate in the elections. PPP registered itself under another name as PPPP (Parliamentarians).

Prior to the elections 43% expected the elections to be fair or somewhat fair while an equal percentage were not sure. Only 14% reported that they think the elections will be unfair or somewhat unfair.

The findings are presented here in form of four reports. Report 1 analyses Pakistani vote banks, by provinces and profiles of major political parties. Report 2 is a detailed analysis of party share of voters across the country from 1988 to 2002. Report 3 reveals the voting pattern in Sindh by discussing the National Assembly Elections 2002, voting trends in previous elections, changing patterns of party dominance and urban-rural voting patterns. The final report in this series analyses the findings of the Exit Poll Survey.

The survey was conducted among a highly scientific sample comprising of 4680 adult men and women chosen from nearly 100 locations across the country. In each of the sample location, 50 interviews (25 male and 25 female) were supposed to be conducted at a male and female polling stations respectively.

Report # 1

An Analysis of PAKISTANI VOTE BANKS

Data compiled by Gallup Pakistan on the basis of the provisional election results announced by the Election Commission of Pakistan.

November 2002

VOTE DISTRIBUTION: ALL PAKISTAN

Party Name	Seats	Obtained Votes	%
PPPP	63	7,616,033	26
PML (Q)	78	7,499,382	26
PML (N)	15	3,370,748	12
MMA	45	3,335,643	11
NA	13	1,395,398	5
IND	28	2,722,669	9
Others	30	3,253,166	11
Total:	272	29,193,039	100

Unlike previous elections in which the winning party scored around 40% of the vote, no political party scored more than 26% of the total polled votes. The fragmentation of votes might however compel political parties to come to terms with each other. The fragmented vote may discourage the urge to dominate, because it is no longer possible.

VOTE DISTRIBUTION: PUNJAB

Party Name	Seats	Obtained Votes	%
PML (Q)	68	6,352,303	34
PPPP	36	4,972,486	27
PML (N)	14	3,092,317	17
MMA	4	1,036,950	6
NA	7	631,164	3
IND	14	1,686,467	9
Others	7	910,962	4
Total	150	18,682,649	100

Even though PML (Q) was a clear winner in terms of the number of seats, its edge in the popular vote is not very significant. It is notable that Peoples Party, despite its occasional oblique association with Sindhi nationalism won almost 5 million votes in Punjab which accounted for 65% of the votes polled by it in the entire country. The election results are likely to further encourage the party to retain its national character rather than being ghettoes as a Sindhi party. Likewise the MMA won only 3 seats in Punjab but over one million votes which accounted for 31% of votes won by it all over Pakistan. MMA should not be viewed as a party restricted to the two provinces bordering on Afghanistan, that is NWFP and Balochistan.

VOTE DISTRIBUTION: SINDH

Party Name	Seats	Obtained Votes	%
PPPP	27	2,213,201	37
MQM	14	929,535	15
NA	5	656,420	11
MMA	6	643,737	11
PML (Q)	4	540,630	9
PML (F)	4	328,264	5
IND	1	399,255	7
Others	0	332,806	5
	61	6,043,848	100

As in the past elections the voting pattern of the two urban centers of Karachi and Hyderabad was very different from the rural Sindh. MQM was the winner in the urban areas of Karachi and Hyderabad. MQM scored 38% followed by MMA 26% and PPP 18%. In the rural areas PPP scored 45% followed by the National Alliance (16%) and PML-Q (12%) as well as PML-F (8%).

But the important development was that both MQM and PPP lost the predominance which they had enjoyed in previous elections. This is particularly true for MQM. At its peak in 1990 MQM was 47% points ahead of the runner up suggesting a complete domination. In 2002 elections it was only 12% ahead of the runner up reflecting a more pluralistic situation in urban Sindh.

VOTE DISTRIBUTION: NWFP

Party Name	Seats	Obtained Votes	%
MMA	29	1,409,344	42
PML (Q)	4	430,009	13
PPPP		300,683	9
ANP		283,112	8
PML (N)		154,835	5
IND	12	561,417	17
Others	2	197,229	6
Total	47	3,336,629	100

MMA emerged as a dominant political party and scored 42% of the total polled votes. The runner up was PML-Q with only 13% of the vote. The Awami National Party (ANP) which had traditionally identified with Pakhtoon nationalism scored only 8% of the polled vote. This was barely half as many votes as the party had polled in 1997 when it scored 19% of the polled votes.

Even though MMA owes its presence in the Parliament mostly to NWFP, its vote bench is dispersed in the other provinces as well. Interestingly, it is more evenly spread out in the four provinces compared to any other major political party (see details in tables on The Provincial Profile of Major Political Parties).

VOTE DISTRIBUTION: BALOCHISTAN

Party Name	Seats	Obtained Votes	%
MMA	6	245,612	22
PML (Q)	2	176,440	16
BNM		165,220	15
JWP	1	94,201	8
PPPP		129,663	11
IND	1	75,530	7
Others	4	243,247	21
Total	12	1,129,913	100

MMA scored 22% of the polled votes followed by PML-Q which scored 16%. The remaining 62% or two thirds of the vote was split among several parties. Thus Balochistan maintained its tradition of producing a highly fragmented result. But it was significant that the top two parties were both nation-wise parties. The purely provincial parties which did not contest elections outside Balochistan failed to make major impact during the election of 2002.

The decline of the exclusively provincial parties was a notable feature of the election of 2002 in Balochistan, NWFP and urban Sindh. In rural Sindh and Punjab such parties have no track record of success, a trend which was maintained in the latest election.

THE PROVINCIAL PROFILE OF MAJOR POLITICAL PARTIES

Number of Seats and percent of votes obtained by leading parties in the four provinces of Pakistan

PAKISTAN PEOPLES PARTY

Two thirds (65%) of all votes obtained by PPP were from Punjab as opposed to 29% from Sindh. This reaffirmed the position of PPP as a political party with national standing. It had however a setback in NWFP. Only 4% of its total vote was from NWFP and 2% from Balochistan.

VOTE DISTRIBUTION: PPP-P

	Seats	Votes	% of votes
All	63	7,616,033	100
Punjab	36	4,972,486	65
Sindh	27	2,213,201	29
Balochistan		129,663	2
NWFP		300,683	4

PAKISTAN MUSLIM LEAGUE-Q

Despite emerging as the largest political party in the Parliament, PML-Q vote was heavily skewed from Punjab, as 85% of the total votes secured by PML-Q are from Punjab.

VOTE DISTRIBUTION: PML(Q)

	Seats	Votes	% of votes
All	78	7,499,382	101
Punjab	68	6,352,303	85
Sindh	4	540,630	7
Balochistan	2	176,440	2
NWFP	4	430,009	6

MUTTAHIDA MAJLIS AMAAL

The provincial profile of votes scored by MMA has a heavy skew in favour of NWFP. However it had sizeable number of votes in the remaining three Provinces.

VOTE DISTRIBUTION: MMA

	Seats	Votes	% of votes
All	45	3,335,643	100
Punjab	4	4036,950	31
Sindh	6	643,737	19
Balochistan	6	245,612	7
NWFP	29	1,409,344	42

PAKISTAN MUSLIM LEAGUE-N

The heavy Punjab skew in the case of PML-N is even stronger compared to PML-Q, as 92% of its total votes are from Punjab.

VOTE DISTRIBUTION: PML-N

	Seats	Votes	% of votes
All	15	3,370,748	100
Punjab	14	3,092,317	92
Sindh	-	96,971	3
Balochistan	1	26,625	1
NWFP	-	154,835	5

INDEPENDENTS

The vote polled by Independent candidates show that this category was fairly well dispersed in the four provinces of Pakistan. It was however higher than the proportion of the province in Punjab and lower in Balochistan and Sindh. In NWFP it was fairly close to the share of the province in the total votes.

VOTE DISTRIBUTION: INDEPENDENTS

	Seats	Votes	% of votes
All	28	2,722,669	100
Punjab	14	1,686,467	62
Sindh	1	399,255	15
Balochistan	1	75,530	3
NWFP	12	561,417	21

A STUDY ON VOTING PATTERN IN SINDH

Party share of vote in Sindh during National Assembly Election 2002

1- VOTING PATTERN IN SINDH IN NATIONAL ASSEMBLY ELECTION 2002

In the 2002 Elections Peoples Party emerged on top in the Sindh province with 37% of the vote, followed by MQM (15%), MMA (11%), National Alliance (11%), PML-Q (9%), PML-F (6%).

National Alliance vote was almost exclusively in Interior Sindh. It scored 16% in Interior Sindh and less than 1% in Urban Sindh* (Karachi/Hyderabad).

In contrast MQM scored mostly in Urban Sindh where it scored 37% of the vote. Its share in Interior Sindh was only 5%.

MMA vote was also mostly restricted to Urban Sindh where it scored 27% of the vote. In Interior Sindh its vote share was only 4%. PPP scored very high in Interior Sindh 45% but had only modest share in Urban Sindh where it scored 18% of the vote.

2- VOTING TRENDS IN SINDH DURING THE LAST FIVE ELECTIONS 1988 - 2002

The data show interesting trends in voting behaviour over the last five elections since 1988. In Interior Sindh the Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) has continued to stay on top. But its share of vote has declined from 68% in 1988 to 45% in the latest election.

In Urban Sindh MQM has continued to stay on top. But its share of vote has also declined from 56% in 1988 (which peaked at 65% in 1990) to 38% in 2002. MMA emerged as a major competitor in Urban Sindh and scored 28% of the 2002 Elections.

3- CHANGING PATTERNS OF PARTY DOMINANCE* PEOPLES PARTY IN INTERIOR SINDH

It is interesting to note that the edge of PPP over the runner up in Interior Sindh reflecting dominance of the party has changed over time. It steadily declined from 1988 to 1997 but rose again in 2002.

Figure 3

* Party edge in this section refers to the percentage point difference in the percent of votes polled by the winner and the runner up.

MQM IN URBAN SINDH

The edge of MQM over the runner up party in Urban Sindh has declined from its peak of 1990 when it was 47% points ahead of the runner up to considerably less in the 2002 elections when it is only 12% point ahead of the runner up or next largest party.

WHO VOTED FOR WHOM ON OCTOBER 10, 2002

Findings from an
Exit Poll Survey

October 19, 2002

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The findings from an Exit Poll Survey designed by Pakistani pollster Bilal Hassan Khan and carried out by Gallup Pakistan and released here today by the Pakistan Institute of Legislative Development and Transparency (PILDAT) show that the Pakistani electorate chose a tripartite parliament in its latest national election held on October 10. The three leading parties in the parliament including Muslim League (Q), Pakistan Peoples Party and MMA, the alliance of Religious parties, have successfully attracted a cross section of voters with a certain regional concentration. PPP came up with a stronghold in the Sindh province, Muslim League in Punjab and the Religious alliance MMA in NWFP and Balochistan provinces. The Exit Poll shows that the Religious alliance and the Independent candidates attracted a disproportionately higher number of the new voters in the age group 18-21 and the better educated with high school or higher education specifically in NWFP and Balochistan. On the other hand, the Muslim League and the PPP did proportionately better among the illiterate and the very poor rural voters. The MMA and Independents performed better among men than women; while PPP experienced a slight advantage among the women voters.

The survey further showed that more than 99% of the voters claimed they had shown their National Identification Card to the Election Officers conducting the election and their thumb had been marked with indelible ink to the prevent double voting.

The survey was conducted in approximately 5000 voters selected statistically from voters at the male and female polling booths spread over more than 60 districts representing all the four provinces of Pakistan and various regions. The field work was conducted face to face on Election Day, October 10, from the start to end of polling.

The exit poll was supervised by a team of scholars and analysts. Bilal Hasan Khan, a notable pollster, was responsible for designing the sampling, questionnaire and other research methodology. Further analysis of the data will be done at a later stage for the benefit of students and scholars of Pakistani politics.

FINDINGS

Pakistani voters have elected a tri-partite parliament divided between Muslim League, Peoples Party and MMA, representing an alliance of religious parties. Between the three of them they comprise around three fourths of the parliament. The remaining one quarter is split between smaller regional parties and Independent candidates.

Pildat Exit Poll provides an interesting insight into the profile of the voters attracted by the three leading parliamentary groups, independents and the rest.

An analysis of the profile of voters supporting the leading parties in the new parliament shows that MMA and independents were able to attract a proportionately higher number of new voters in the age group 18 to 21 years. They were also able to attract a proportionately higher number of the better educated and higher income groups. In contrast the Muslim League (Q) which won the largest number of seats mainly from rural Punjab attracted proportionately higher number of voters from low income and lower education backgrounds. There is great similarity between the income, education and age profile of the Peoples Party and PML (Q). But PPP has a notable edge among the very poor. Analysts at Gallup have pointed out that PPP enjoyed this type of edge over the Muslim League in the election held in 1988 but had lost it in the three succeeding elections in 1990, 1993 and 1997, during which the populist appeal by Nawaz Sharif had removed the difference in their appeal to the marginalized and poor. Apparently the 1988 trend has partly reemerged in the election of 2002.

Another interesting shift is in the appeal to younger voters. In the 1988 elections Gallup Exit Poll Surveys showed that PPP had a disproportionately higher score among the young voter. The situation is no longer the same in the 2002 elections. The edge among the young is now seen in the voters of MMA and the independents.

The data suggest that both MMA and Independents were able to attract a larger share of the younger and better-educated voter who expressed their dissatisfaction with the performance of traditional political parties and leaders. Parties able to project themselves as alternatives to the status quo gained substantial new support.

The survey further said that both MMA and Independents did slightly poorer among women than men. But taken on the whole, the three major parliamentary parties gained support from the mainstream of the Pakistani electorate, each attracting substantial numbers of men and women, educated and the illiterate, poor and well to do, young and old. The exit Poll data does not reflect a skewed or strongly partisan support from any distinctive socio economic group for any of the three leading parties in the parliament. According to political analysts this is a healthy sign for the democratic functioning of the parliament.

The tables provided at the end of this press note provide further insight into the socio-economic composition of the voters supporting PML (Q), PPP, MMA, Independents and others.

The Pildat Exit Poll Survey throws some light on the administration of Election Day and the balloting process, notably on the use of indelible ink mark and the use of National Identification card for identification of the voter. More than 99% of the voters sampled in this exit-poll said they had shown their National ID card and their thumb had been marked with indelible ink to prevent the possibility of double voting. Only 15% of the voters said they were concerned that interference on the polling day could hurt the prospects of victory by their favourite candidate. When asked if they felt pressured or morally compelled to vote in a particular way, a vast majority of voters denied any pressure; only 6% responded in the affirmative. However this proportion was higher than the national average, among voters in the NWFP (13%).

The Pildat exit poll included a cross section of voters comprising both men and women and voters from the rural and urban areas in more than 60 statistically selected districts representing all the four provinces of Pakistan and its various regions. The fieldwork was carried out face to face by a team of men and women who interviewed a statistically selected sample of voters. The voters were interviewed outside the polling booth. The error margin for a survey of this kind is estimated to be  $\pm 3\%$  at 95 percent confidence level.

Voting Among Different Age Groups

According to the Exit Poll 7% of the Voters belonged to age group 18-21 years. The proportion was higher than average for MMA and Independents whose voters included 11% and 15% respectively of the new voters of this age group. The figure is lower than average for PML(Q) and PPP whose total voters included 6% and 5% of young voters.

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

About the survey

The survey was conducted among a highly scientific sample comprising of 4680 adult men and women chosen from nearly 100 locations of all the four provinces of Pakistan including Islamabad.

The choice of the sample was strictly on the basis of the probability of various provinces in the Census distribution of the population. The rural and urban voters also came out in the same ratio as their share in the population. Similarly voters with respect to the age were in the same ratio as their share in those eligible to vote. The gender distribution also corresponded with their census share. Thus the sample was highly represented in most of the population proportion, age 18 years and above.

In each of the sample location, 50 interviews (25 male and 25 female) were supposed to be conducted at a male and female polling stations respectively. The sampling interval was 15 minutes at each location.

The field work was conducted face to face by a team of men and women on the election day, 10th October 2002. The error margin for the national sample is highly likely to be in the range of  $\pm 2-3\%$  approximate at 95% confidence level.

Sample: National probability sample, Rural and Urban, covering all the four provinces. (except Fata, Chitral and Kohistan)

Sample Method: Multi-stage area probability sample*

Sample Size: 4680 men and women

Sample Proportion Exit Poll

	Sample Proportion	Actual Population Proportion	Actual Population Proportion Excluding FATA, Chitral, Kohistan
Punjab including Islamabad <sup>1</sup>	59%	56.20%	57.94%
Sindh	24%	22.97%	23.67%
Baluchistan	5%	4.99%	5.14%
NWFP <sup>2</sup>	12%	15.85%	13.23%
Total	100%	100.01%	100%

1. Punjab is slightly over represented mainly due to sampling error and also due to exclusion of FATA, Chitral and Kohistan districts in NWFP. Actual population proportion includes FATA, Chitral and Kohistan.

2. NWFP is slightly under represented mainly due to sampling error and also due to exclusion of FATA, Chitral and Kohistan districts in NWFP. Actual population proportion includes FATA, Chitral and Kohistan.

	Sample Proportion	Actual Proportion	Actual Population Proportion Excluding FATA, Chitral, Kohistan
Urban	35%	33%	33.51%
Rural	65%	67%	66.48%
