ISLAMABAD: The Sustainable Development Policy Institute (SDPI) survey, conducted by Gallup revealed that majority of people do not want Imran Khan to be designated as the PM of the country.

Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaaf stands as a most popular and emerging party, but still majority of people do not want Imran Khan, the chairman of PTI to be designated as the PM of the country.

The survey conducted by SDPI was based on collecting different views regarding the continuation of democracy, whereas the survey revealed that majority participants who were the part of this survey did not want Imran to be the PM of the country, whereas they also had confusing view regarding the government's performance.

The survey expressed the majority choice of the rule of democracy, which accounted to be 84 percent, whereas 14 percent of the participants chose dictatorship over democracy.
