A significant majority (86 %) of Pakistanis agree with the statement that it is really important to them that their fellow villagers/neighbors are proud of them. (GRF POLL)

Islamabad, September 30, 2016

According to a Gilani Research Foundation Survey carried out by Gallup Pakistan, a significant majority (86%) of Pakistanis agree with the statement that it is really important to them that their villagers/neighbors are proud of them.

A nationally representative sample of men and women from across the four provinces was asked, “Please tell if you agree or disagree with the following statement: ‘It is really important to me that my neighbors/villagers feel proud of me.’” In response to this question, 48% said that they agree very much with the statement, 38% said that they agree to an extent, 10% said that they disagree to an extent, and 3% said that they disagree very much. 1% did not know or did not wish to respond. This is significant because it draws a circle around the society of people an average Pakistani takes into account when planning or making important decision about his/her life.

Question: “Please tell if you agree or disagree with the following statement: ‘It is really important to me that my neighbors/villagers feel proud of me.’”
