

Public Opinion in Pakistan in the Year 2004

GOVERNANCE Local Government

(2004-2016) Increase in public support for political government to solve the country's problems; drop in support for military government or a coalition of the two. GILANI POLL/GALLUP PAKISTAN

Islamabad, December 1, 2016

According to a Gallup Pakistan National Survey conducted in the year 2004 (12 years ago) respondents were asked, "In your opinion, what kind of government would be best to solve the country's problem?" To this, 36% said political government, 27% said military government and 35% said coalition of political and military government. 2% did not know or did not wish to respond.

Comparative Picture: The question was asked again in 2016 to enable a concrete comparison. In 2016, 58% said political government, 22% said military government and 20% said coalition of political and military government.

According to public opinion, there has been a 22% increase in the proportion of Pakistanis who believe political government is the best government to solve the country's problem, a 5% decrease in the proportion of Pakistanis who believe military government is the best government to solve the country's problem and a 15% decrease in the proportion of Pakistanis who believe coalition of political and military government is the best government to solve the country's problem.

This press release has been made as part of the Gallup Pakistan History Project which aims to release historical empirical polling data to wider audiences. The objective is to sustain and encourage empirical decision making in Pakistan.

Question: "In your opinion, what kind of government would be best to solve the country's problem?"
