Islamabad, August 13, 2018

According to a Gilani Research Foundation Survey carried out by Gallup & Gilani Pakistan, 6 in 10 Pakistanis (63%) say that if there was a way to find out the time of a person's death, they would not be interested in knowing when they will die.

A nationally representative sample of men and women from across the four provinces was asked "Suppose there was a way for people to know when they are going to die. Please tell if you were given such a chance, would you be interested in knowing when you will die?" In response to this question, 36% said they would like to know when they will die, while 63% said they would not. 1% did not know or did not respond.
